Oxnard Man Sentenced to Life Without Parole for 2013 Santa Paula Murder

VENTURA, California – District Attorney Gregory D. Totten announced today that Andres Rodriguez (DOB 12/14/84), of Oxnard, was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole after pleading guilty on September 12, 2017, to first-degree murder with a special circumstance of kidnapping, premeditated and deliberate attempted murder, and admitting use of a gun in the commission of these crimes. Rodriguez's accomplice, Melissa Salazar (DOB 2/17/78), of Santa Paula, was sentenced to 20 years in prison after pleading guilty on September 12, 2017, to kidnapping and robbery, and admitting a prior strike conviction.

On July 17, 2013, Rodriguez and Salazar kidnapped a female victim at gunpoint and forced her to divulge the location of a man and woman who stole property from Rodriguez and Salazar earlier that day. The female victim directed Rodriguez and Salazar to a home in Santa Paula where Rodriguez, armed with a semi-automatic pistol and a ballistic vest, entered and located the couple who had barricaded themselves in a bathroom. Rodriguez fired multiple shots through the bathroom door, then entered the bathroom as the male victim escaped out a window. Rodriguez then shot the female victim in the head. After releasing the female kidnap victim, Rodriguez and Salazar fled to Mexico. They were arrested by detectives from the Santa Paula Police Department on September 10, 2013, with the assistance of the United States Marshals Service.
